LEARN TO SPOT LOAFING HENS

A hen that doesn't "look right" is probably not "laying right." By keeping a watchful eye on the laying flock, poultrymen are able to pick out most of the non-layers. While this method of culling may not be quite as accurate as trapnesting or keeping hens in individual cages, it's reliable enough so that experienced producers make few mistakes.

The loafing hen is a drain on the flockowner's purse. Hens that cannot be brought back into production should be removed from the flock.

In actual practice, culling should begin when the chicks are taken from the incubator and should be continued as long as the birds live and make up part of the flock. It doesn't pay to waste equipment, money and time trying to keep inferior birds.

Observe Differences

There are definite physical characteristics and habits of hens that enable the experienced grower to pick out the layers from the non-layer. A good layer is more active more alert and yet less flighty and more easily handled than a poor layer. Heavy layers are the first off the perch in the morning and the last on at night.

When not on the nest, a heavy layer is usually scratching or ranging in search of feed. A high-producing bird has a seldom satisfied appetite.

A hen that is laying has a large, moist vent, showing a dilated, pliable condition in contrast to the puckered hardness of the vent of the non-laying hen. The pelvic bones of the laying hen move apart. There is usually a distance of 3 or 4 fingers between them.

Hens with coarse, phlegmatic masculine or beefy heads are not likely to lay very many eggs. Conversely, those with clear cut, rugged, alert heads are likely to be among the best layers.

The disappearance of yellow pigment in the shanks and beak is an indication of laying. This alone however, should not be considered a definite sign since the type of feed also has some affect on pigment.

A poultryman should first look for conditions within the laying house which may be causing layers to cut production. Chills, dampness and drafts are often responsible for laying slumps.

When a flockowner is convinced that the feed or his management is not to blame for loafing hens, he should act at once to get rid of the guilty hens. There's no room in a profitable flock for hens that do not lay eggs.

AHS Newscast

By Jane Holt

January 4, 1955

Dear June,

Well, we are all back in school now getting ready for exams that will be coming up soon. How about you? Christmas was really nice for us. It was so good to see many of the college students home.

Basketball is getting back into the schedule. Even though you alumni beat us, we enjoyed playing you. We start '55 playing Marshall District High at Buckingham Wednesday night. Then on Friday night, here at Appomattox, the AHS teams play Madison Heights.

The Spanish Club is celebrating Christmas today, because in the Spanish speaking countries the children exchange gifts on the sixth of January, instead of our usual date. So Feliz Mavidad, Spanish students!

I was told today that the following students from the eighth grade have made the Honor Roll: Sandy Burks, Clarence Grishaw, Shirley Burge, Ann Cunningham, Virginia Mullins, Ruby Shirlen, Dorothy Pulliam, Peyton Abbitt, Helen Martin, Mary Ann McBearmon, Frank Lee Burke, Jerry Harvey, Jack Henry Dennis Torrence, Etta Beale, Louise Wood, Dan Coleman, Jerry Martin Peggy Godsey. Isn't that a grand number, though? I hope more of us will be able to make such an achievement before the year is over.

Today the Tri-Hi-Y and Hi-Y Clubs met. In the Senior Tri-Hi-Y Alice Ashworth, Barbara Herndon and Mary Walker Evans are responsible for a thought a day to be put in each homeroom. Don't you think that is a good project? The Model General Assembly is coming up soon, so some students were appointed to work on a bill to be presented. They are Edna Gregary, Lucy Perdue, Ronnie Lewis, and Jerry George. With these people, a good bill should be produced. January 15th the Sr. Tri-Hi-Y is going to sponsor a bakery sale at the Appomattox Hardware. Farnces Ramsey, Alice Ashworth, Madeline Guill, Peggy Wooten, and Joan Weeks are going to see to it that all of us get our cakes and pies baked. Want me to send you one? Among the four Hi-Y and Tri-Hi-Y clubs we have organized on inter-club council which we hope will be very successful. Shirley Morris is going to represent the Sr. Tri-Hi-Y.

This concludes the news around the grounds of ole AHS for now. Be looking for more news next week, same time.

'Til then,
Jane.

OAK WILT DISEASE FOUND IN VIRGINIA

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 5.- The dreaded oak wilt appears at present to be confined to the mountainous areas of Virginia, according to a report just released by State Forester George W. Dean.

A survey made last summer and early fall found the oak wilt in the counties of Highland, Bath and Washington. According to the survey Highland County is worst hit, with five separate spots and eighteen trees in the infection centers.

The survey was conducted skilled observers in low-flying airplanes who marked the location of all suspect trees on maps. These spots were later visited on the ground to make a detailed check. On all trees which were suspected of dying because of the oak wilt a laboratory test was made for confirmation.

Flight lines were flown on a sampling basis. Flights over Piedmont and Coastal areas failed to reveal any suspect oaks.

A somewhat similar survey in 1953 revealed the wilt in Wise and Warren Counties, in addition to Highland, Bath and Washington. In the counties of Wise and Warren the land owners carried out recommended control measures, and no evidence of the disease was found in 1954.

Oak wilt probably is spread over long distances by certain types of insects that feed on the spore-forming pads which appear under the bark of infected trees. The bark over the pads is cracked open by them as they grow, exposing them to the air. As the insects feed the sticky spores adhere to their bodies. These insects also feed on the sap exuding from axe cuts and freshly broken branches on healthy trees. The spores are brushed off into the wound, grow into the wood and infect the tree. Within a group of trees, the disease spreads from one to another by means of root grafts. Such trees shed their leaves, which are discolored prematurely and may be dead within a few weeks after becoming infected.

Bobbitt- Pasquan

In a double-ring ceremony in the Holy Redeemer Catholic Church, North Bend, Ore., Dec. 5, Miss Barbara Ann Pasquan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luis Pasquan, North Bend, became the bride of W. G. Bobbitt, Jr., U. S. Air Force.

The Rev. Paul Malyszko officiated in the service at 2 P. M. A reception followed immediately in the parish hall.

The bride wore a gown of white lace and pleated tulle. Lace formed the bodice, and the bouffant skirt was fashioned from alternate tiers of lace and pleated tulle. A jacket of tulle was fastened at the neckline beneath a lace mandarin collar. Her fingertip veil was held by a pearl bandeau. Mr. Pasquan gave his daughter in marriage.

Miss Patricia Choat was maid of honor. Miss Janet Goll and Mrs. Wendell Stadden were the bridesmaids. They wore gowns of white net over taffeta with accents of deep purple to carry out the color scheme of the wedding. Purple bows were pinned at the waists of the attendants to match their shoes, and they carried bouquets of white roses and carnations tied with purple streamers.

Ray Kozak was best man. Ushers were Roger Fenstermaker and Fred Scemica.

Organist for the occasion was Mrs. A. J. Eberhart.

After the newlyweds had received their guests, the bride's cake was cut by Mrs. Elmer Goll. Beetina Shanley poured coffee, and Mrs. Ray Morin served the punch. Miss Sally Karavanich had charge of the guest book.

Gardenias and roses encircled the cake which centered the bride's table. Purple candles in crystal candelabra were the accents.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Pasquan wore a purple silk afternoon frock with lavender accessories, a sequined hat and a corsage of white elf roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Bobbitt went to Eugene for their honeymoon. For traveling the bride wore a brown wool sheath dress with matching jacket and avocado green accessories. Her corsage was green orchids. Since their return they are residing at 970 California S., North Bend, Ore.

The bride attended the University of Oregon after her graduation from North Bend High School. She was a member of Alpha Xi Delta sorority. She is employed as a bookkeeper for the North Bend Medical Group.

The bridegroom, who came from Richmond, Va., was graduated from Willson High School in Appomattox, Va. Before entering the service he was with the Virginia State Police. He is now stationed with the 76th AC & W squadron, North Bend.

CURORKE, - WINGFIELD

Mr. and Mrs. James Julian Wingfield, of Appomattox, announce the marriage of their daughter, Jo Barbara, to Frank Leo Curorke, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Geo Curorke, Coatsville, Pa. The ceremony took place Sunday, Dec. 26 at the Patronsage of Liberty Bap Church, Appomattox. Dr. Carl Collins, Jr., pastor, officiated, in the presence of members of the family.

Mrs. William Witt, Jr., sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and Richard L. Wingfield, brother of the bride, was best man.

The bride is a member of the Woodrow Wilson Junior High School faculty in Danville. Mr. Curorke is a member of the New York Giants baseball organization.

VAUGHAN - COMER

The marriage of Miss Sarah Elizabeth Comer, daughter of Mrs. Lena Garland Comer, of Farmville, and the late Mr. Comer, to William Lloyd Vaughan, of Farmville, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Leo Vaughan, of Victoria, was solemnized Thursday, Dec. 23, in the Farmville Baptist Church parsonage, in the presence of a few close friends and relatives of the couple.

The Rev. B. R. Bruner officiated for the ceremony at 7 o'clock in the evening.

The bride is on the staff of the People's National Bank. The groom is advertising manager of the Farmville Herald.

After a brief wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan have returned to their positions, and have established a home at 403 South Main Street, Farmville.
